Administrative History

A course in psychology was first offered by the University in 1915, through the Department of Philosophy. Prof. James Henderson was the sole member of the Department until 1920, when Dr. H.T.J. Coleman was appointed Head (as well as Dean of Arts). Only one course in psychology was taught until 1926, but by 1936 enough courses had been added to the curriculum for the Department's name to be changed to Philosophy and Psychology. Dr. Coleman was replaced as Head by J.A. Irving in 1940, followed by S.N.F. Chant in 1945. When Prof. Chant became Dean of Arts and Sciences in 1948, he remained Department Head, but Dr. Barnet Savery acted as Chairman in his absence; starting that year, separate staff meetings were held for faculty in the philosophy and psychology programs. Beginning in the 1940's the Department expanded rapidly, and during this period moved from rooms scattered around the campus into a number of Army-surplus huts. In 1951 the Department was authorized to grant a Ph.D. in clinical psychology, although the first such degree was not actually awarded until 1968. The Department of Psychology was established as a completely separate unit in 1958, with Professor Chant as its Head, and Prof. Edro Signori as Chairman and, after 1961, Acting Head. Dr. Douglas T. Kenny was appointed Department Head in 1965. That same year the Department moved from its old huts to new facilities in the Angus Building, sharing the building with the Faculty of Commerce. Under Dr. Kenny's leadership the Department continued to grow in terms of faculty, students, and course offerings; also, its programs became less eclectic, and more focused on experimental psychology and research. When he resigned in 1969, Prof. Signori served again as Acting Head until Dr. Peter Suedfeld was appointed in 1972; he, in turn, was replaced by Dr. Richard C. Tees in 1984. In 1984, the Department moved again, to the new Kenny Building. Over the years the Department of Psychology has grown to become one of the largest in the Faculty of Arts.

Scope and Content

The fonds consists of correspondence, reports, and minutes of meetings relating to the activities and programs of the Department of Psychology, and photographs of Department Heads and prominent faculty members. Some records date from before the formation of the Department, when the psychology program was still part of the Department of Philosophy and Psychology. Also included are audio recordings of interviews (with typed transcripts) documenting the Department's historical development.

The material is arranged in six series: Administration, Departmental Committees, Departmental Programs, External Correspondence, Historical Files, and Oral History Project. The Historical Files series consists of textual records which document the Department's formative years, and photographs; they had been placed in a box and stored separately from the Department's other records until transferred to the Archives.

Notes

File List available. Audio recordings can be found in the vault AT 1057-AT 1062.

The audiotaped interviews with former staff, along with typed summaries, were produced through an oral history project undertaken in 1982-83, and copied by the Archives in 1983 for its audio-visual holdings.

Photographs included in UBC Archives' Historical Photograph Database (UBC 6.1).
