Biographical sketch:

Jim Hamm was born in Abbotsford, British Columbia, in 1949. He was educated at Simon Fraser University, completing a Bachelor of Arts in History in 1975, a Teaching Certificate in 1977 and classes in Film Studies in 1983. He has been writing, producing and directing documentaries since 1983.

Highlights of his career in documentary filmmaking include:

- “Generic Desire” (1983)
- “Smile and Dial” (1987)
- “The Air We Breathe” (1996)
- “Between The Rock and A Hard Place” (1997)
- “Turning Down the Heat” (1999)
- “The Spirit Wrestlers” (2002)
- “Radical Attitudes: The Architecture of Douglas Cardinal” (2004)

Hamm has also been the production manager for several feature films, “Terminal City Ricochet”, “Shelley” and “Regeneration.” Other documentary films in which he has been involved in the capacity of line producer or production manager include “A Chance for Change,” “The Sentencing Dilemma,” and “Gurdwara- House of the Guru.”

Scope and Content:

The Jim Hamm Documentary Film Collection consists of materials relating to three of his documentary films: “The Air We Breathe” (1996), “Between the Rock and a Hard Place” (1997) and “Turning Down the Heat” (1999).

“The Air We Breathe” was a co-production of Jim Hamm and the National Film Board. It is an examination of the problem of smog in relation to political decisions, dependency on automobiles, and social-cultural forces. Hamm acted as co-producer, script writer and director. The film was broadcast on the CBC, WTN, SCN, Knowledge Network and Access Alberta.

“Between the Rock and a Hard Place” was produced in association with CBC Newsworld. It is the story of Newfoundlanders who leave their home province after the collapse of the cod fishery, ironically finding work in the exploit of another natural resource in Fort Nelson, British Columbia. The film was aired on CBC Newsworld and on CBC Newfoundland.

“Turning Down the Heat” was co-produced with the National Film Board in association with CBC’s program “The Nature of Things,” narrated by David Suzuki. The film showcases viable solutions to climate change by reducing greenhouse gas emissions. Hamm acted as director, co-producer and co-script writer. The film was aired on “The Nature of Things,” and has other screenings nationally and internationally.

Storage issues dictate that the textual materials relating to these films and the audio visual materials be separated, so the fonds therefore contains the series:

- “The Air We Breathe” Textual Materials series
- “Turning Down the Heat” Textual Materials series
- “Between the Rock and a Hard Place” Textual Materials series
- “Turning Down the Heat” Audio/visual Materials series
- “The Air We Breathe” Audio/visual Materials series
- “Between the Rock and a Hard Place” Audio/visual Materials series

The largest division of the fonds is the audio/visual materials.

Title is based on the contents of the fonds.

VHS format screening copies are available for public access. The BETACAM SP format tapes are restricted for preservation reasons.

Rare Books and Special Collections also holds the Jim Hamm Doukhobor Research Collection.

The appendices that accompany the finding aid are footage logs for the audio/visual materials, provided by the creator upon transfer to Rare Books and Special Collections.
