Collection Description

APEC Inquiry Collection (various collectors). – 1997-2001.

6.45 m of textual records and other materials.

Background

In 1997, outgoing UBC President David Strangway invited the Asia Pacific Economic Co-operation (APEC) Leaders to meet to UBC. The meeting, which would take place on November 25, 1997, was part of the APEC Summit taking place that same month in Vancouver and would see the, often controversial, leaders of numerous nations, including China, Indonesia and the US descend on UBC. A number of groups, many of them student lead, criticized UBC's decision to host the event, and the months leading up to the summit saw increasing action on the UBC campus against the coming APEC summit. These actions, including those organized by the student-led APEC Alert, were geared toward raising awareness of APEC among students, staff and faculty, and encouraging political action and active resistance against APEC. Many of these groups and protestors considered APEC to be undemocratic, complicit in the erosion of human rights and in fostering a society of consumption, and promoters of environmental destruction.

Following a series of peaceful demonstrations on the morning of November 25 1997, protesters, including members of APEC Alert, and police began to clash in the afternoon. At one of the roadblocks on N.W. Marine Drive (Gate 6), RCMP officers moved into the crowd with pepper spray, an incident captured by a CBC News crew. A number of protesters, including 48 students, were arrested.

A variety of legal actions were initiated in the days after the protests and arrests. Serious charges were leveled at the RCMP for their handling of the event, and for their alleged role in the suppression of free speech and other civil rights. Allegations of political interference by the Prime Minister's Office (PMO) into the actions of the RCMP were also made. An official inquiry into the events at UBC was launched by the RCMP's Public Complaints Commission (PCC) on February 20, 1998, and formal hearings commenced October 5, 1998. Following allegations of further political interference, the hearings ended abruptly with the resignation of the Inquiry's Chief Commissioner, Gerald Morin, on December 4, 1998. A second round of hearings under the direction of Ted Hughes began on March 23, 1999, and concluded on June 30, 2000. The PCC's interim report was released on July 31, 2001, and its final report appeared on March 25, 2002.

Scope and Content

The collection consists of exhibits, videotapes and documents collected for the PCC, correspondence and legal documents related to both the PCC and related legal actions, APEC Alert posters, information, pamphlets and ephemera, other material collected and created by Oppenheim with regard to the events surrounding APEC and the RCMP PCC, transcripts of the PCC proceedings, and a number of photographs.

Notes

Includes: 79 video tapes, 22 photographs, 2 diskettes.

The collection was acquired by the UBC Archives in separate donations by Jonathan Oppenheim and Annette Muttray in 2008.

File/item list available.

In memory of Sheri Ash, who compiled, organized and looked after parts of this collection from 1998 until her death. She was intimately involved with the legal team for the students for the court challenges and for the RCMP Public Complaints Commission's inquiry into APEC – without her, much of this collection would not have survived to be donated to the University Archives.

Series Descriptions

Jonathan Oppenheim Series. – 1997-2001.

4.79 m of textual records.

79 VHS Tapes.

22 Photographs.

2 computer diskettes.

In 1997, Jonathan Oppenheim was a graduate student in the Physics Department at the University of British Columbia and a member of APEC Alert, a grassroots group formed at UBC of students, former students, faculty, staff and others who were opposed to APEC (the Asia Pacific Economic Summit) on the UBC campus and to the entire APEC agenda. Oppenheim was involved in organizing and carrying out APEC Alert's three phases of resistance to APEC. "Refuse APEC" ran to November 17.

"Summit Under Siege" began November 17 with the erection of a tent city on the lawn to the west of the SUB. "Crash the Summit," began November 25, the day that UBC would welcome APEC. In the early afternoon of November 25th, protesters and police began to clash in the afternoon. Among the various actions taking place on the UBC campus that day, protesters, including Jonathan Oppenheim, broke through a police barricade at Gate 3 near the School of Theology. He was subsequently arrested.

Jonathan Oppenheim was party to the legal actions launched in the days and weeks following the APEC Leader's meeting at UBC alleging that he had been wrongfully arrested and that unnecessary force was used by police during his arrest. Oppenheim chose to represent himself at the PCC hearings and was a vocal critic of the process insisting that it could have no lasting effect due to its inability to call then Prime Minister Jean Chretien to account for decisions made in and around the protests at UBC. In the end, frustrated by what he saw as the corruption of process, Oppenheim "resigned" from the PCC proceedings on February 25, 2000.

The series consists of exhibits, videotapes, photographs and documents collected for the PCC, correspondence and legal documents related to both the PCC and related legal actions, APEC Alert posters, information, pamphlets and ephemera, and other material collected and created by Oppenheim with regard to the events surrounding APEC and the RCMP PCC.

Annette Muttray Series. – 1997-2001.

1.66 m of textual records.

In 1997, Annette Muttray was a graduate student in the Biology Department at the University of British Columbia. Muttray was a vocal opponent to what she viewed as UBC's preoccupation with money before education and was involved in various actions on campus directed at showing discontent with this preoccupation. On November 25, 1997, during the clash at UBC between RCMP, Vancouver Police and student and other protesters, Muttray was arrested while searching for fellow protester and friend Jamie Doucette who had, himself, been arrested some time earlier. Muttray was taken to the Richmond Police Detention Facility alongside many other APEC protesters, and, like the other female protestors, subjected to a strip search by police. Muttray, like many of the other student complainants at the APEC PCC, was a vocal critic of the process insisting that it could have no real effect as long as the respondents (in this case, the RCMP among other government ministries) were responsible for vetting their own documents and evidence. In the end, Muttray's allegations that her arrest had been inappropriate, and that her bicycle and backpack had been left unattended by police were rejected by the PCC Commissioner. In addition, while the strip search of female prisoners was, in general, deemed inappropriate by the Commissioner, he agreed that Muttray had been legally and rightfully arrested and that her strip search was, therefore, not unlawful.

The series consists of exhibits collected for the PCC and transcripts of the RCMP PCC Hearing from August 1999 to June 2000.
