Biographical Sketch

Blythe Alfred Eagles, UBC's long-time Dean of the Faculty of Agriculture (1949-1967), was born in New Westminster in 1902. His parents reached British Columbia with their respective families in 1885; his mother arriving from Ontario and his father from England via Manitoba. Both families were actively engaged in agricultural or horticultural pursuits.

Eagles entered UBC in 1918 where he took a double Honours program in biology and chemistry. During his studies, he attended classes taught by some notable pioneer professors at UBC including, A.H. Hutchinson, C. MacLean Fraser, R.H. Clark, John Davidson, Douglas MacIntosh and E.H. Archibald. Eagles also studied agriculture as a minor. This was, in large part, prompted by the ideas of President F.F. Wesbrook and Dean L.S. Klinck who stressed the importance of integrating the study of the humanities, basic science and applied science. As a result Klinck and later F.M. Clement offered agriculture courses to students in Arts and Science. In later commenting on this approach Eagles reflected "from Dean Clement I came to appreciate the inter-relationship between food and agriculture both from their economic and nutritional aspects."

After graduating from UBC in 1922 with the Governor-General's Gold Medal, Eagles secured a fellowship to pursue graduate studies at the University of Toronto under the direction of Dr. V.J. Harding. He studied in the Departments of Biochemistry and Pathological Chemistry obtaining his M.A. and Ph.D. in 1924 and 1926 respectively. Eagles then became a Research Fellow at Yale University (1926-1928). While there, he was seconded to the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington. Following Yale and Washington, he spent a year of post-doctoral study at the National Institute for Medical Research in London.

In 1929, Eagles returned to UBC and began a thirty-eight year affiliation with the University. The position he assumed was unique at that time. It consisted of a half-time teaching, half-time research appointment with half of the funds for salary, equipment and supplies provided by the Empire Marketing Board. Eagles was to undertake work on the biochemical aspects of cheese-ripening under Prof. Wilfrid Sadler and develop courses relating to the dairy industry in biochemistry and microbial physiology. In 1930, Eagles married Violet Evelyn Dunbar. She earned a B.A. (1921) and M.A. (1922) from UBC and then continued her graduate studies at the University of Toronto. Working with Professors Wastenays and Borsook, her area of specialization was research in pure proteins and enzymes and she became recognized as one of the leading enzyme chemists in the country. In 1929 Violet Dunbar received her Ph.D. and returned to UBC where she participated in research funded by the Powell River Company.

Blythe Eagles' long affiliation with the University was interrupted briefly between September 1932 and March 1933 when a forty percent reduction to UBC's operating grant resulted in his lay-off. Eagles and forty other member of the faculty became victims of the Depression. During this period he found employment as an industrial chemist with the Powell River Pulp and Paper Company.

After the death of Wilfrid Sadler in 1933, Dean Clement asked Eagles to assume Sadler's heavy teaching responsibilities. Eagles later went on to become Head of the Dept. of Dairying (1936-1955) and then Chairman of the Division of Animal Science (1955-1967) in the re-organized Faculty of Agriculture. Eagles succeeded F.M. Clement as Dean of the Faculty of Agriculture in 1949 and continued in this capacity until his retirement in 1967.

Eagles served on UBC Senate for twenty years (1947-1967) and as president of the B.C. Academy of Science in 1946/47. He is a fellow of the Agricultural Institute of Canada, Royal Society of Canada and the Chemical Institute of Canada. In 1966, the UBC Alma Mater Society named Eagles as recipient of the Great Trekker Award. Traditionally, the award is given to an alumnus of this university who achieves eminence in their work, contributes to the community and maintains an on-going interest in UBC. As a student, Blythe Eagles helped plan the 'Pilgrimage' [or Great Trek as it has become known] in 1922 when 1,100 students of the fledgling institution marched to what is now the Point Grey campus to compel the government to provide the facilities promised before World War I. While Eagles participated in the planning of the event and in the collection of some 56,000 supporting signatures, he had already left for studies at the University of Toronto when the event was staged. On the occasion of his Great Trekker award, the Vancouver Sun paid Eagles the following tribute:

Apart from this early venture [helping to plan the Great Trek] into lively public relations, his work has consistently been quiet, effective and practical achievements in applied science and university administration. It is recognized in academic circles by his formidable list of degrees, publications, appointments and offices. To industry, he is known for his valuable researches into cheese ripening and pulp and paper making.

But his administration of the Faculty of Agriculture may well outrank these. Of all the faculties, Agriculture has had the closest and most personal relations with the problems and progress of a large and important section of the people of British Columbia. It has consistently been accessible and helpful to, not only organizations and industries, but individual ranchers, farmers, dairymen and specialist growers.

Eagles also received an Honorary D.Sc. from UBC in 1968.

An assessment of Eagles' contributions can be extended beyond his notable academic and administrative accomplishments. He and Violet Eagles have also made important, although less tangible, contributions in a social sense. They and their Burnaby home have achieved something of a reputation for entertaining colleagues, students, family and friends. These social occasions fostered new and lasting acquaintances amongst faculty members and students. This interaction was particularly significant during an earlier period when the university community was smaller than the institution that we have come to know today.

Throughout his career and into his retirement Eagles has displayed unwavering concern for the development of the University and has recognized the importance of preserving its history for posterity. To this end Eagles has become a key figure in the organization and implementation of several historical projects through the Alumni Association's Heritage Committee.

Sous-fonds Descriptions

L.S. Klinck sous-fonds. -- 1913-1983.

53 cm of textual records.

24 photographs: b&w and col.; 20.5 x 25.5 cm or smaller.

Born in Victoria Square, Ontario, Leonard S. Klinck developed an early appreciation for the land. He completed his first degree at the Ontario Agricultural College in 1903 and continued his studies at Iowa State College (M.S.A., 1905) where he studied under P.G. Holden. Klinck then assumed responsibility for the cereal husbandry activities at Macdonald College in Quebec. Klinck first visited Vancouver in 1914 to consult with UBC President F.F. Wesbrook about the development of the university. He was forthwith invited to become the university's first Dean of Agriculture. In accepting the position, Klinck became the first appointment to the UBC faculty. Following the sudden death of Wesbrook in 1919, he became UBC's second president. From 1919 until his retirement in 1944, Klinck oversaw the physical expansion of the university through the Fairview campus days, the war-delayed move to the new campus at Point Grey, the controversies of the 1930s and the trying circumstances of World War II.

Sous-fonds consists of material generated by Klinck as well as records accumulated after his death by his wife Elizabeth who passed this material on to Eagles. Sous fonds contains four series: Biographical Information, Addresses/Speeches, Subject Files, and Miscellaneous Personal Material series.

This material augments information in the L.S. Klinck papers and Presidential Records - Klinck.

Wilfrid Sadler sous-fonds. -- 1902-1930.

13 cm of textual records.

Wilfrid Sadler was born in Cheshire, England, the son of James Sadler who, for many years, had been prominent in agricultural and dairy organization work in Great Britain. Wilfrid Sadler came to Canada in 1912 and studied agriculture, earning a B.S.A. (Macdonald College) and M.Sc. (McGill University). He became the first appointment to UBC's newly created Dept. of Dairying in 1918 and four years later became head of the department. Sadler served in this capacity until his tragic death in 1933. While on a four month leave of absence from the university to recover from poor health, he went missing overboard from a cruise ship. Sadler was succeeded as department head by Blythe Eagles.

Sous-fonds consists of articles, addresses, lecture notes, correspondence, exams, conference programs, and publications pertaining to Sadler's professional life.

F.M. Clement sous-fonds. -- 1932-1974.

19.5 cm of textual records.

Born in Niagara-on-the-Lake, F.M. Clement took degrees in agriculture at the Ontario Agricultural College (1911) and the University of Wisconsin (1922). After serving two years as a lecturer in Horticulture at Macdonald College and two years as director of the Vineland Experimental Station, he came to UBC as a professor of Horticulture in 1916 and became Dean of the Faculty of Agriculture in 1919. He led the Faculty for thirty years before retiring in 1949 at which time he gave way to Blythe Eagles. In recognition of his accomplishments and special interests, Clement was, in 1940, appointed Professor and Head of the newly-established Department of Agricultural Economics. Clement's outstanding contributions to UBC make him one of the institution's most notable pioneers.

Sous-fonds consists of biographical information, notes, addresses, correspondence, articles, printed materials, and publications pertaining to Clement's personal and professional activities.

H.R. MacMillan Building Opening (1967)

On June 14, 1967, a new forestry-agricultural complex was opened on the campus. Named in honour of the distinguished forest industrialist, the H.R. MacMillan Building provided the facilities for inter-disciplinary training in two closely related areas of study which arose out of two of the provinces renewable resources. Presiding over the opening of the new facilities was one of Eagles last official duties as Dean of Agricultural Sciences.

UBC HISTORY - GENERAL

Fairview / Heritage Committee Records

The Fairview Committee was established under the auspices of the Alumni Association in the mid-1970s. Composed of UBC graduates from 1915 to 1928, the Committee undertook projects designed to commemorate the history of the university, particularly relating to the Fairview era. Working on the recommendations of the Committee, the Board of Management of the Alumni Association passed the following motion at its January 1983 meeting:

“That the work of the Fairview Committee be incorporated into a new heritage committee for UBC and that this committee be given every support by the Alumni Association to look after the recording and preservation of the University's heritage.”

Blythe Eagles, who served as chairman of the old Fairview Committee, assumed the chairmanship of the expanded Heritage Committee. The Heritage Committee included the following three original sub-committees:

- 1) Fairview - Dr. Harry Warren (Chairman)
- 2) 1928 - 1945 - A.H. Rome (Chairman)
- 3) 1945 - present John Banfield (Chairman)

Later a 1963 - 1986 sub-committee was added.
