Administrative history / Biographical sketch

Note

The Consolidated Employees Benevolent Society was established in 1921 or 1927 to augment health insurance provided by the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Canada (CM&S, later known as Cominco) in Trail, B.C. The Society administered a co-operative plan, i.e., a plan run by the employees themselves rather than their employers or health service providers. At the time of the Society's founding, CM&S provided health insurance to cover both occupational and non-occupational sickness. The Society provided sick benefit payments to employees unable to work, whether temporarily or permanently, due to non-occupational sickness or accident—excluding cases in which that sickness or accident was caused by or incidental to a sexually transmitted infection or the consumption of alcohol.

Although the Society's coverage of different conditions varied over the decades, workers applied and received benefits for the following types of claims: infectious diseases (e.g., cold, influenza, hepatitis, mumps, pneumonia, scarlet fever), illnesses and conditions (e.g., appendicitis, back pain, bronchitis, cardiovascular disease, gastrointestinal conditions, hernias, jaundice, vertigo), injuries (e.g., amputations, broken bones, strains, wounds), medical procedures and post-op recovery time (e.g., amputations, appendectomy, dental procedures, hernia repair, spinal surgery), chronic physical conditions (e.g., arthritis, asthma, diabetes, eczema, epilepsy, lead poisoning), and mental conditions and illnesses (e.g., alcoholism, anxiety, depression, schizophrenia), among others. To receive benefits from the Society, the claimant had to follow appropriate Society by-laws, including: requesting membership in the Society and paying monthly dues; properly engaging in communications with both Society Directors and doctors via the appropriate forms and according to a prescribed timeline; being fully unable to work for a minimum period of time due to a covered non-occupational sickness or accident; and not being entitled to any time loss compensation from other people, corporations, or government agencies.

The Society was formed and initially run by the Consolidated Workmen's Co-operative Committee, which acted as a bargaining agent for CM&S smelter workers between 1920 and 1944. The Committee was terminated as workers' official bargaining representative in 1944, replaced by Mine Mill Local 480.

Since the Committee had been run as part of CM&S, administration of the Society likely fell to another department within CM&S. However, based on its name change in 1972 to USWA (Cominco Council) Disability Income Society, administration of the Society at some point was likely transferred to Mine Mill Local 480, also known as United Steelworkers Local 480. Due to the growing number of vehicular accidents in which workers were not covered by insurance, Society funds were increasingly depleted. Perhaps due to the state of its funds by 1974, the Society disbanded in 1975 and officially dissolved in 1978.

Custodial history

Records were likely held by the USWA (Cominco Council) Disability Income Society and/or by United Steelworkers of America, Local 480, until the Society's disbanding in 1975 or its official dissolution in 1978. At some time between 1974 and 1979, employees' medical files were transferred to and stewarded by the British Columbia Federation of Labour until their donation in 1979 to the UBC Library Special Collections Division.

Scope and content

The fonds consists of medical claim files collected between 1939 and 1974 for Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Canada (CM&S, later known as Cominco) workers in Trail, B.C. Files include claim forms with doctors' certificates, checks to sick accounts, correspondence between the Society and worker and/or worker's doctor, medical examination sheets, and other material produced by workers' participation in the claim process.

Claim forms were submitted by workers every fourteen days during a given benefit period to obtain claim payment. These forms generally record dates from which the employee was absent and was expected to return to work, a doctor's diagnosis and certification of the worker's claim, and, if relevant, details of the sickness or accident inciting medical attention. Some files include a full medical examination sheet, which was required for a worker's acceptance as a Society member. Although not included in every file, correspondence was produced when the Society assessed the validity of a claim and/or extended benefits, doctors attested to an employee's fitness (or lack of) to return to work, and workers checked on the progress of their claims.

Notes

Title notes

- Source of title proper: Title based on the contents of the fonds.

Immediate source of acquisition

Fonds was donated to the UBC Library Special Collections Division by the British Columbia Federation of Labour in 1979.

Arrangement

Files were likely sampled prior to donation or during their original processing. Files were further sampled during 2024 re-processing. The 2024 sampling followed a hybrid randomized-qualitative methodology, with the archivist attempting to capture a breadth of diagnoses and circumstances that informed the Society's actions. After sampling, the archivist arranged case files according to their original file numbering. To protect claimants' privacy, the archivist altered file titles by replacing claimants' full names with their initials in first-middle-last name order.

Accruals

No further accruals are expected.
