Administrative History

In the autumn of 1955, President Norman Mackenzie appointed a Committee on Automation to investigate "the University's total interest in computers and automation in general". The Committee consisted of approximately 20 members representing most of the research interests on campus and was chaired by E.D. McPhee. At the Committee's first meeting on November 16, 1955, four sub-committees were formed: Departmental Interests and Specifications; Training and Curriculum: Type Equipment; and Library Needs and Resources. The Committee held several meetings and prepared a number of reports on various facets of computerization.

The University of British Columbia Computing Centre was established in the spring of 1957 with the installation of the ALWWAC III-E. Because of the ever-increasing demand for memory and speed, the Computing Centre eventually replaced the ALWAC with the IBM 1620 in 1961. The IBM 7040 was introduced in 1964 and IBM 360/67 and IBM 7044 was introduced in 1967. Over the years the Centre has continually upgraded its facilities to provide academic and administrative computing services to the University.

In the 1990's, the Computing Centre went through many major changes both structurally and functionally. In 1994 it became a core component of a new division known as University Computing & Communications (C&C). C&C initially had four main branches under it known as University Computing Services, Telecommunication Services, Media Services (later ImPress), and UBC Press. In 1995 Information Systems Management was absorbed by C&C. In 1999 Computing & Communications became Information Technology Services (IT Services). In 2003, IT Services was restructured and, after removing two units that did not fit its mission, became UBC Information Technology "IT." In 2010 several major administrative IT groups were amalgamated under UBC IT. As of 2018, the department service offerings range from IT-related strategy, applications, infrastructure, to support services.

The department has had several heads since its inception. The title for the head of the department over the years has evolved from Supervisor, to Director, to Associate Vice-President. Occasionally, the head of the department has also been the Chief Information Officer of the University. This is currently the situation for the current President, Jennifer Burns (2015 –). Previous individuals holding the top leadership position over the years have included T. E. Hull (1957 -1964), James M. Kennedy (1966 – 1980), Alvin G. Fowler (1981 – 1985), and Jack L. Leigh (1986-1997), Ted Dodds (1997 – 2009), Oliver Grüter-Andrew (2009 – 2015).

Additional administrators of note include S. Werner “Vern” Dettwiler (Acting Head 1963-1965), Dr. Richard Spencer (Acting Head 2007-2008), Carol J. Bird, and Jim Tom. Carol was Assistant Director (1980-1990), Associate Director of Academic Services (1990-1993) and Director of Information Systems Management (1993-1995). Jim Tom was Director of Telecommunications (1992 – 1999), Director of Networks (1999 – 2004), and Director of e-Learning & Telestudios (2004).

Formerly known as the Computing Centre fonds.

Title based on the contents of the fonds.

Last two items in Box 24 were donated by Ed Chow in 2015. The newsletters in Box 30 were acquired from Jenifer Monger at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in New York. The remainder were acquired from the Computing Centre and UBC IT in various accruals.

Sous-fonds Description

Canadian Information Processing Society (CIPS) Sous-fonds. - 1962-1978.

18.5cm of textual records.

The Canadian Information Processing Society is a national organization that has individual sections in major cities throughout the country. Each section has its own executive and elected members. CIPS' mission is to define and foster the IT profession, to encourage and support the IT practitioner, and to advance the theory and practice of IT, while safeguarding the public interest. Prior to 1965, CIPS was known as The Computing and Data Processing Society of Canada. The name was changed to The Computer Society of Canada. By 1968, The name had been officially changed to CIPS. J.M. Kennedy, the director of the Computing Centre at UBC from 1966 to 1979, was the president of CIPS from 1971 to 1972. The sous-fonds also includes materials related to the Northwest CIPS 1978 Conference, apparently collected by Jack Leigh, of the UBC Computing Centre, as well as proceedings from the North West '78 Conference.

The sous-fonds consists of constitutional amendments, board meetings, executive meeting file and correspondence made or received by CIPS, and some miscellaneous records that were created prior to the name changes. However, the majority of records originated from the time that Kennedy was the president of CIPS.

80cm of textual records.

25 photographs.

The series consists of records that document the origins and establishment of the UBC Computing Centre. Most of the records, however, document the historical evolution of the administration and the operation of the Centre between the time of its opening and 1970. It includes information from the Automation Committee and material on the installation of the Centre's first computer, the ALWAC III-E.

Arrangement is based on the reconstruction of a file guide that was found among the records.

Pre-1969 Series. - 1957-1963.

15cm of textual records.

The series consists of various records that were created before 1969. It includes Computing Centre Committee Meeting Minutes, a Computing Centre Report, Budget Records, and a Progress Report.

1969-1978 Series. - 1969-1978.

The series consists of records pertaining to budgeting, committees, minutes of meetings, policies, major projects, and the Computing Centre's relationship with IBM. Subseries are: Correspondence, Financial, Internal Affairs, University Affairs, Committees, Academic Bodies, and Standing Committees. The Academic Bodies Subseries is comprised only of records of the Computer Science Department.

This series was previously arranged into the existing subseries by the Computing Centre as part of its filing system.

Systems Hardware Operations Committee (SHOC) Series. - 1972-1989.

30cm of textual records.

The series consists of minutes of SHOC meetings. Files from prior to 1975 contain more detail and various attachments.

The series consists of reports, budgets, minutes of committee meetings, technical information and other administrative and operational records of the computing centre. These records were made or received by Jack L. Leigh who became the Director of the Computing Centre in 1987. This series of records appears to be a continuation of the previous series; however, it is a separate series by virtue of its arrangement. Arrangement of this series is chronological.

UBC Computing Centre Documentation Series - 1965-1991.

1.95 m of textual records.

The series consists of documents produced by the UBC Computing Centre. The series includes a number of guides produced by the UBC Computing Centre from 1972-1990 which offer both a keyword index and a bibliography of the documents produced by the UBC Computing Centre. The series also includes a number of technical notes that amended the documentation produced by the UBC Computing Centre.

Photograph Series. - [n.d.].

45 b&w photographs of various sizes.

The series consists of various photographs of the Computing Centre and related individuals. The majority of photographs are situated in the Computing Centre; however, some depict individuals outdoors. In addition to individuals and the Centre, itself, some photographs are of computers, printers, processors, and other equipment. These photographs appear to have been used in a display because several of them have been cropped.
