Dear Carolyn:

The message on this card was first given me by a six-year-old friend who doesn't seem to me as confused as most of us if as reluctant to accept certain aspects of 'reality'.

I am just back from the hospital where Helen today had her operation, all preliminary reports negative; so, though the elaborate tests are still to be taken, there is virtually no worry about cancer. So, though it's going to be a hard week, and a slow six weeks recovery, it's toward real health again, and I feel a bit light headed with relief.

I hope you're really better by now and not too pressed by the inevitable chores of the season. Do have a happy one. We will now, too, no matter how quiet.

Affectionately,

Yours
