Introduction

The history of the lumber unions in the Pacific Northwest and British Columbia is an interesting yet hardly-studied subject. The developments which led to the formation of the International Woodworkers of America in 1937 affected the structure and subsequent course of the union. Unionism arrived in the Pacific Northwest region of the United States a full ten years before it took hold in British Columbia, and this affected the makeup of the segments of the I.W.A. The Pacific Northwest's union experiences were inaugurated with craft unionism and only slowly and painfully did it advance to industrial union status. In B.C. however, due to the ten-year lag industrial unions were in control from the start.

In B.C. the predecessor of the I.W.A. was the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union ( a one-time affiliate of the One Big Union ). On April 4, 1936 the L.W.I.U. decided to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor; they were to be grouped under the A.F.L.'s Carpenters organization. Harold J. Pritchett was elected president of the newly-affiliated L.W.I.U.. Pritchett had first come into public prominence in 1931 when as a shingle weaver he had been elected chairman of the Fraser Mills strike committee.

There was a great deal of discontent with the A.F.L. in the lumbering industry on the West Coast. Representatives of all locals in the newly-organized union met on September 18, 1936 and discussed the situation. The result of their discussions was the formation of the Federation of Woodworkers ( known as the I.W.A. after July 15, 1937 ) and the man elected as president was Harold Pritchett.

Born in Birmingham, England in 1904, Harold Pritchett's parents emigrated to Canada in 1912 settling in Port Moody, B.C. At the age of 15, Pritchett went to work in a sawmill and within two years he was actively involved in the labour movement. As well as being the first International President of the I.W.A. Harold Pritchett served as President of I.W.A. District Council No.1, secretary of the Vancouver Labour Council (CCL) and secretary of the B.C. Federation of Labour. He was also a member of the C.I.O. Housing Committee. After having served as International President of the I.W.A. from 1937 until 1940 Harold Pritchett resigned. This was as the result of the denial of an entry visa into the U.S.A. due to his Communist affiliation.

In October, 1948 Harold Pritchett led an unsuccessful attempt to form the independent Workers' Industrial Union of Canada. After four tumultuous years the W.I.U.C. rejoined the I.W.A..

The papers in this collection are mainly composed of the records of the I.W.A. International and the I.W.A. District Council No.1 from the years 1937 until 1950. There are also lesser amounts of L.W.I.U., L.S.W.U., W.I.U.C. materials as well as a small compilation of Harold Pritchett's personal papers mainly from the 1950s to the 1970s.

The material has been divided by the various organizational structures represented in the collection as can be seen in the table of contents.
