EVELYN GREY SMITH

While knowledge of Evelyn Grey Smith's early years is limited (born in 1904) she claims distinguished ancestors including Earl Charles Grey (an important figure who aided Lord John Russell with the 1832 Reform Act) and Lord Grey of Fallodon (a wartime Foreign Secretary of Great Britain and Governor-General of Canada.) Evelyn's marriage to Don Smith in the late 1930's found her becoming increasingly active in the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation. She lived most of her life in Vancouver.

She joined the CCF in Kamloops in 1933. Among her activities, she took part in Camp Woodsworth, the CCF summer camp near Nanaimo. During the 1940's and early 1950's she was an active member of the Stanley Park CCF Club. It was often her task to organize speakers for the Stanley Park Club Forum. She attended many conventions as a delegate from this club.

Besides writing articles for submission to various publications, Evelyn wrote columns and book reviews for the CCF News on behalf of the Education Committee. A lover of socialist books and material, she found her niche in the Literature Committee. Her enthusiastic work with literature, however, led her into many conflict situations with others in the CCF, eventually coming to a head at the 1950 National Convention (see "Literature Incident").

Evelyn was never pleased with what she perceived as the reformist drift of the CCF. She maintained that socialist education was the necessary key to real change. It was in the summer of 1950, just after the National Convention, that similar-minded people within the CCF held the Left-Wing Conference. Out of this meeting came the Socialist Caucus, later known as the Socialist Fellowship. This group of left-wing members of the CCF, which contained some notables, met regularly. They published their own publications, Socialist Thought and Materials for Thought, which contained articles on socialist subjects and philosophy. Eve was active in writing articles for them.

Companion groups were to be found in Trail, Nanaimo, Victoria and Ontario (the Ginger Group). However, in April of 1951, after about eight months, the Socialist Fellowship was forced to dissolve. The CCF Executive ruled that it was a de facto party within the CCF, and thus contrary to the CCF constitution.

Frustrated with the CCF, Evelyn became involved with the Socialist Party of Canada, joining in 1953. Her efforts were no doubt a boon to the struggling Vancouver local.

She personally worked with Frank Roberts and Matthew Glenday, one-time CCF candidates in Vancouver Centre. Their correspondence and personal papers are found in the collection.

She worked very hard for what she believed in. Both her friends and her opponents undoubtedly thought that her energy was endless. The root of her philosophic activities can be found in one of her favourite statements: "Criticism is something you can avoid by saying nothing, doing nothing, and being nothing".

The papers are arranged by series with some sub-groups. Included are many articles by people other than Evelyn Grey Smith.
