INTRODUCTION

Humphrey Toms (1911?-1983)

His research seems to have begun while posted in England during WW II and was centered on the towns of Stratton and Bude in Cornwall, then extending out to North Cornwall and Devon. His main correspondent was Reg Walter, an English researcher, but he wrote to several other genealogists as well. He made many personal visits to libraries and record offices in London, Devon and Cornwall, California and Salt Lake City, during his vacations from the Agricultural Research Centre at U.B.C. where he was a plant pathologist.

The records consist of extensive correspondence, extracts from vital statistics records, parish registers, maps, family trees, copies of wills and his personal notes of families in Devon and Cornwall. Many of these extracts date back to the sixteenth century.
