T.U.R.B. INTRODUCTION

The Trade Union Research Bureau (T.U.R.B.) is an independent labour research organization which has served Western Canada's trade unions for many years. Originally established as a Canadian branch of the Pacific Coast Labour Bureau in 1938, it was re-organized in 1946 as an independent, locally-owned business and given its present name.

Seventy-five boxes of T.U.R.B. files have been donated to the Special Collections Division of the U.B.C. Library. These include union audits, case files, source files, union newspapers and convention reports, etc. The files date from the 1930's through to the 1970's and provide a valuable source of information on B.C.'s trade unions. Although primarily involved with B.C. unions, T.U.R.B. has also worked for various unions outside the province.

An inventory has been prepared in which the files are listed according to the union involved. Those files containing material dealing with more than one union have been cross-listed. There are also separate headings for those items which do not directly concern a specific trade union. As an example, any files concerned with a union and the City of Vancouver would be found listed ONLY under the appropriate union. Only when a file concerning the city does not involve a specific union will it be listed in the inventory under the City of Vancouver. The files remain in the same boxes and in the same order as they were when donated, although they have been renumbered. For information on T.U.R.B. aside from its labour research component, see the records listed on p. 105.
