Fish, Cannery and Reduction Plant and Allied Workers Union

Title: United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union fonds

Dates: 1934-1979

Physical desc.: 90 m of textual records ; 10 plans

Bio/Admin History: The United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union was established in 1945 through the merger of the United Fishermen's Federal Union and the Fish, Cannery and Reduction Plant and Allied Workers Union. It survived strong competition from the B.C. Gillnetter's Association in 1952 and the Seafarers' International Union in 1953. The UFAWU was suspended by the Trades and Labour Congress in 1953 for alleged communist activities. It was not until 1972 when the Union's application for affiliation with the Canadian Labour Congress was accepted that its right to represent the majority of B.C. fishermen was recognized. The Union has strengthened the bargaining position of its members and it has undertaken to improve wages and working conditions in the industry.

Scope/Content: The fonds consists of minutes, correspondence, reports, legal documents, financial records, plans, sound recordings, published and printed material generated by the UFAWU, its locals and predecessor organizations including the United Fishermen's Federal Union, the Pacific Coast Fishermen's Union, and the Fish, Cannery and Reduction Plant and Allied Workers Union, as well as office files from former Presidents William Rigby, Homer Stevens, and Jack Nichols.

Title source: Title based on the contents of the fonds.

Finding aids: Inventory available.

HISTORY OF THE COLLECTION

The bulk of the collection, totalling approximately 34 linear metres, was deposited on permanent loan with the City of Vancouver Archives in 1974. The materials were arranged and inventoried as Add. Mss. 285, following the CVA numbering system. Two addenda, were accessioned by the CVA in 1976 and identified by it as ADD. Mss. 418.

In July 1981 the UFAWU decided to donate the material to the UBC Library, and it was finally transferred in 1982. In addition to the UFAWA records, the records of the Fisherman Publishing Society, CVA'S Add. Mss. 423, were transferred. The Fisherman Publishing Society's photograph collection is held in a separate location in Special Collections Division. In April 1982 an additional ca. 7 linear metres were transferred from the UFAWU office. In accordance with the University's agreement with the Union, further records will be transferred to Special Collections from time to time in the future.

ORGANIZATION OF THE COLLECTION

The original UFAWU collection, known as Add. Mss. 285 in the City of Vancouver Archives numbering system, was described as Finding Aid No. 34.

The collection was divided into records (which were designated Vol.1 to Vol. 308) and published materials (designated Publ. 1 to Publ. 453). In accordance with the wishes of the UFAWU, the published materials were not kept in a separate location.

The collection also included boat plans, which are now filed in the Map Cabinet no.8, posters and graphs, now filed in Map Cabinet no.5; tapes of UFAWU conventions, now filed with the sound recordings collection; photographs and oversize materials, now shelved following Publ. 453; and the transcripts of the Coady Commission hearings, now designated as Box 309, and shelved following Publ. 453.

Addendum no.1, consisting of records of the UFAWU and its predecessors, is now designated as Boxes 310-313. It is described in the CVA Finding Aid no.188.

Addendum no.2, consisting of membership cards, sick benefits records, and a scrapbook (1937-1949), is now designated as Box 314.

Addendum no. 3, consisting of record transferred from the UFAWU office in 1982, is designated as Boxes 315 onwards. Boxes no. 315 to 326 were arranged by James Bowman and a list was prepared of material to be sorted in addendum no.3.

RESTRICTIONS

When the UFAWU papers were transferred to UBC in 1982, the University agreed to the following condition:

- "UBC agrees that the General Executive Board Minutes' will be
- restricted for twenty years and that during this period access will be granted only to researchers who provide written permission from the President of the UFAWU or designate. On the expiry of the twenty year period, the minutes shall be open to any qualified scholar engaged in serious research, according to the practice of the Special Collections Division of the UBC Library."

INTRODUCTION

The earliest organization of fishermen in British Columbia occurred in 1893 and had its basis in the exclusion of Chinese from fishing the Fraser River. This movement paralleled the wave of anti-Chinese feeling prevalent in British Columbia during that period. However, by the early years of the twentieth century, the primary target of attack was the strict control of prices and wages by the fish canning companies, notably B.C. Packers. The Vancouver fishermen, as well as their Japanese and Native counterparts, formed their own associations to combat the companies, which, in turn resorted to scab labour and police action. Following an unsuccessful strike in 1900, several fishermen's lodges united to form a Grand Lodge, centered in New Westminster. Even so, the strikes of 1901 and 1902 were firmly resisted by the companies.

The position of the fishermen was seriously worsened in 1902 when 43 canneries were amalgamated by the B.C. Packers Association. After this date, and for several decades, the strength of fishermen's unions diminished while that of their opponents increased. A 1913 strike, led by Japanese fishermen and shoreworkers for a short period. But it resulted in no tangible gains. Thereafter, the main area of union activity shifted to the Finnish community of Sointula on Malcolm Island. Since many of the inhabitants of this community were imbued with socialist and "utopian" ideals, they added distinctive flavour to the movement. This flavour has been retained throughout its history. Still, the fishermen of British Columbia remained extremely divided. The Fraser River Fisherman's Protective Association was formed in 1914 with the sole intention of excluding the Japanese from the Pacific Coast fisheries. The Japanese and Natives had their own organizations with restricted aims. The piecemeal and ineffectual nature of fishermen's unions was spotlighted by the failure of a strike attempt in 1922. As a result, the next decade saw many attempts to unite fishermen into a strong body which could make its demands heard. In 1931, two unions were formed-- the United Fishermen's Federal Union and the Fishermen's Industrial Union. The latter became the Fishermen and Cannery Workers Industrial Union in 1933. Successive strikes in 1932, 1935, and 1936 were marked by the strength of companies and the impotence of the unions. Thus it was that the Fishermen and Cannery Workers Union reorganized into the Salmon Purse Seiners Union and the Pacific Coast Fishermen's Union. Both groups adopted fairly militant tactics and jointly established a newspaper in 1937 entitled "The Fisherman" as their organ. In addition, they continued attempts to unite the scattered unions of fishermen, which now numbered in the dozens. The S.P.S.U. joined the United Fishermen's Federal Union in 1940. They were followed in 1944 by the Fraser River group. Japanese fishermen were eliminated after the bombing of Pearl Harbour. Finally, in 1945, the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union was born. It managed to survive anti-communist investigations known as the McCarthy era. It faced strong competition from the B.C. Gillnetter's Association in 1952 and the Seafarer's International Union in 1953.

In the same year, the U.F.A.W.U. was suspended by the Trades and Labour Congress for alleged communist activities. Not until 1972 was its application for affiliation with the Canadian Labour Congress accepted and its right to represent the majority of British Columbian fishermen recognized.

Since its foundation, the U.F.A.W.U. has improved the bargaining position of fishermen significantly. In 1947, standard prices for sockeye salmon were obtained, and they have been rising ever since. In 1949, a welfare fund for fishermen came into being. The salmon tendermen achieved better prices and working conditions after their strike in 1954. The shoreworkers have made important gains since 1946. However, for the Halibut, Herring, and Trawl fishermen, the gains have been smaller due to company opposition and their own internal divisions. At present, the primary aim of the U.F.A.W.U. is to obtain improved conditions and wages for those sectors of the fishing community which have lagged behind the others. Another practical aim is that of the strict limitation of fishing licences. But the U.F.A.W.U. has been quite active in more far reaching issues as well. Noteworthy among these are: air-sea safety, conservation of fish and other natural resources, and opposition to nuclear testing.

UFAWU

Addendum No. 5

The records described in this addendum are a continuation of the records already transferred to the Special Collections Division of the UBC Library and represent those records no longer used by the United Fishermen Allied Workers Union. Further such accruals are expected.

The six metres of records in this accrual date between 1938 and 1984 with the majority of the records covering the period, 1955-1973. The records relate to the activities of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and to a small extent those of the Fish Cannery-Reduction Plant and Allied Workers Federal Union, The Pacific Coast Fishermens Union and the United Fishermens Federal Union. The records document conventions (1944-1974), Canada-U.S., herring, salmon and tendermen negotiations (1939-1975), meetings of the General Executive Board of the Union (1964-1974), locals and various committees (1958-1976) and the administration of UFAWU welfare funds (1947-1975). Membership records are also included (1936-1972) as are reports and submissions made by the Union to government and commissions (1943-1984) and correspondence files (1938-1976).

The records were appraised before being arranged. Duplicate, redundant and transitory records, such as invoices, receipts and monthly financial details of transactions from companies participating in UFAWU welfare fund programs, were discarded. Reports and statistical materials from other record creating bodies which were not an integral part of files, were also destroyed. The archivist then identified subgroups and series. The records are arranged by series alphabetically as there was no apparent original order to the files. There is one subgroup: Sooke Local.
