GERMAN REPRISALS.

(New York World-Telegram.)

American actors who took part in the Hollywood filming of "The Road Back," by Erich Maria Remarque, have received notices from the German consul in Los Angeles that any film on any subject in which they appear hereafter may be banned from Germany.

That is reprisal for you, and with a vengeance.

As the author of "All Quiet on the Western Front," of course, Remarque already was in the bad graces of the Nazis. He is an exile. His enemies, in effect, have reached across the ocean and used Hollywood actors in order to hit him in Switzerland—which is no mean stretch.

And the Nazis also have been able to hit the actors themselves. The film producers collect quite a bit of velvet from their foreign rentals. The consul's warning means that not only may Remarque stories appear less desirable and bring a smaller price hereafter, but the actors thus blacklisted will be socked in their earning power. Producers will think twice before hiring them.

This is an official act, quite distinct from the private boycott on German products now carried on by individual Americans.

Members of the Notre Dame de Grace C.C.F. Club at a meeting held last night unanimously adopted a resolution declaring themselves in sympathy with the movement to boycott goods made in Germany.

The resolution was adopted on a motion by S. L. Magid, seconded by Miss M. Sheridan, after several members of the club denounced the treatment accorded Jews, Catholics, Protestants and the people of Germany under the Nazi regime.

The question was brought before the meeting by the chairman, R. N. Elliot, secretary of the club, who called the attention of the members to a decision taken by a large group of non-Jews who decided to boycott German coal. The resolution, as adopted, however, applied to all German-made goods.

Ralph Grossman, chairman of the finance committee of the club, first opposed the resolution on the grounds that the German coal-miner was not responsible for the conditions which existed in his country and that such a boycott would directly affect his earning power.

Mr. Magid, speaking in support of his resolution, said that the general boycott had received the unanimous support of the American Federation of Labor and he believed that the C.C.F. should work in harmony with all labor bodies.

"Boycott," said Mr. Magid, "is the only weapon which we have at our disposal and we should take advantage of it to the greatest possible degree."

He said that Hitler had already started to feel the pinch of the boycott and attempts had been made to have goods shipped to England and other countries and there transhipped as goods manufactured in those countries.

Mr. Grossman finally decided to vote in favor of the resolution.

Main discussion at the meeting was the raising of funds for the series of broadcasts planned by the Provincial Council of the C.C.F. during the coming winter.
