

be aware

1. Filling out and returning the application form does not mean that you have been accepted into a Centre.
2. All day care centres at UBC are run by parents. Applicants should visit the centres, talk to parents and staff and be interviewed for a space. In this way, you will feel comfortable with the system and the centres will get to know you and your expectations about child care.
3. If you live out of town,
 - a. apply as early as possible;
 - b. plan to come into town early enough to make your child care arrangements before you begin school or job;
 - c. keep in touch with the centres. Tell them your plans and establish that your name be held on the waiting list until your arrival.

The Day Care Coordinator can process letters requesting child care applications, can supply information and advice, etc., but acceptance in a centre is a matter between applicant and the centre concerned.

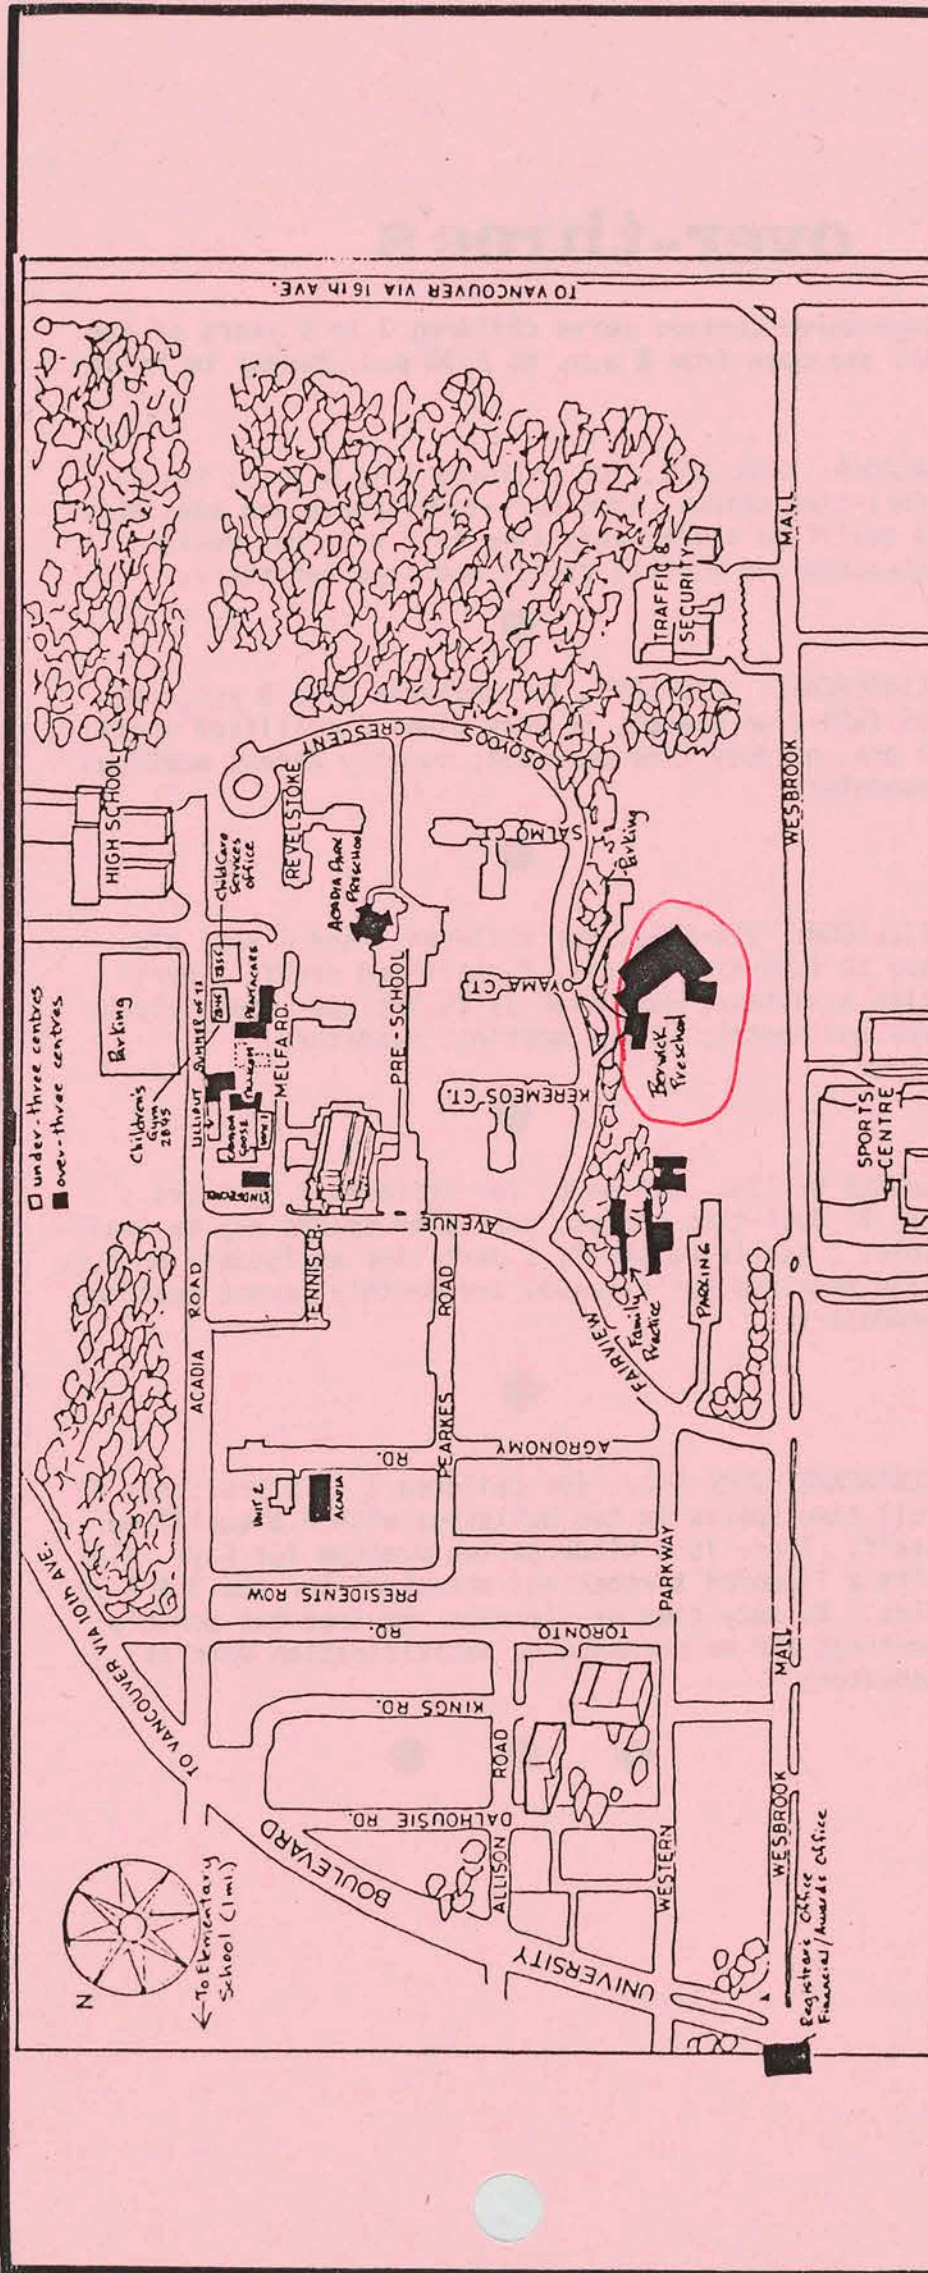

It is wise to apply to all the centres available to you.

CHILD CARE AT UBC

228-5343

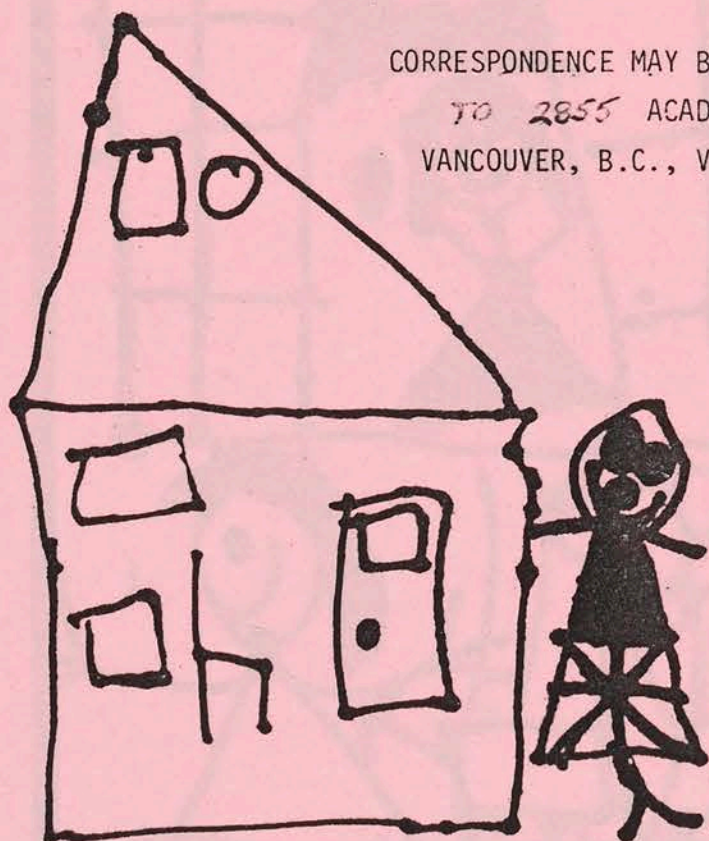

There are 11 independent, non-profit parent cooperative group child care programs located on the U.B.C. campus for children of parents affiliated with U.B.C. as students, faculty or staff.

Four centres care for children from 18 months to 3 years of age; five centres care for children from 3 to 5 years of age; one program provides a half-day pre-school for 3 and 4-year olds, and one provides after-school care for children at University Hill Elementary School.

All centres were established by parents needing care for their children. As employer/managers, they are responsible for the complete operation of the programs; they keep the books, hire the staff, admit new parents and maintain the centres on a daily and long-term basis. In some centres, parents also assist the staff in providing the programs. This time spent by parents in the centres is called "duty time"; the number of hours required varies from centre to centre. Two over-three centres and the after-school program provide no-duty care.
