Introduction

Angus MacInnis, 1884-1964

Angus MacInnis was born in 1884 at Glen Williams on Prince Edward Island. Gaelic was spoken in his home and he did not learn English until attending school. Upon his arrival in Vancouver in 1908, Angus found a job driving a milk wagon seven days a week. Two years later he obtained employment with B.C. Electric, as a streetcar conductor. Active in his union, he soon became business agent for the Street and Railway union.

Though born a Tory, Angus became a socialist upon viewing the injustices of the 1911 Nanaimo coal strike. In 1918 he became a member of the Federated Labor Party, and later joined the Independent Labor Party. He entered civic politics in 1922, winning a School Board seat for two years. He sat as an alderman on the City Council from 1926 until 1930. His attempts at the Provincial Legislature in 1924 and 1928 were unsuccessful. In 1930, Angus was elected to Parliament as a member of the Independent Labor Party for the riding of Vancouver South.

While in Ottawa Angus met Grace Woodsworth, daughter of his parliamentary leader J.S. Woodsworth. They were married in 1932. Angus was involved in another marriage in that period—a political one. He was one of the two B.C. delegates to the Calgary Conference in 1932, where farmer, labor, and socialist interests met. He took an even higher profile the next year, 1933, when the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation was officially formed in Regina.

Once elected to Parliament, Angus proved unbeatable, being re-elected in 1935, 1940, 1949, and 1953. He sat on the CCF National Executive from 1933-1950. Angus had a great interest in international affairs. With Grace he toured Europe in 1936 in order to investigate the work of socialist parties and cooperative movements. In 1944 he was the CCF representative in a four-member delegation which visited Australia and New Zealand under the auspices of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association. In 1947 he went, as a parliamentary advisor to the Canadian delegation, to the United Nations. In 1950 he travelled to Geneva for the annual conference of the International Labor Organization, acting as an advisor to the Canadian Government delegates.

After serving the people of Vancouver South, Vancouver Kingsway, Vancouver East, and Canada, Angus retired in 1957. He died seven years later on March 2, 1964. His causes were many: the unemployed, veterans, pensioners, racial minorities, and the poor. Perhaps for what he will be remembered most was his absolutely fearless stand on the Japanese-Canadian situation during the Second World War. Amidst the destructive hysteria, Angus stood tall with his principles of equality and justice. For his courageous work in this area the U.B.C. Civil Liberties Union presented him with the Garnett Sedgewick Award. Other honours bestowed include an Honourary Doctor of Laws from U.B.C. He joins a select few in history as being a man admired by both his friends and political foes. Angus MacInnis: a man to remember indeed.
