Intermedia was established in 1967 as a non-profit society. An immediate success, Intermedia fulfilled a need in the Vancouver artistic community for a central meeting place for all different types of creative minds. The interest in group activities, group creativity and community-related projects arose out of the changing lifestyles and values of the young people of the sixties. Intermedia described its initial aims in this way:

At the time of its inception Intermedia aimed to create a centre of community resource in Vancouver where artists, architects, engineers, technologists and educators could come together to explore new models and formats for the purpose of intensifying and expanding the effectiveness of creative sensibility in the community.

Later the aims of the society were shifted to emphasize individual artists and smaller groups:

The purpose/aim of Intermedia is to help the artist realize himself and his work by providing an umbrella/shelter of cooperatively-structured, contiguous and inter-related functioning artists' groups, often service-oriented.

Intermedia provided support both financially and morally for all of the artists and groups connected to it. With the help of Canada Council and federal government grants, Intermedia put on exhibitions, workshops, educational seminars and impromptu social and artistic gatherings.

As Intermedia grew and the spin-offs from Intermedia became independent, the core group, Intermedia Society, began to lose importance as a source of inspiration and support (see attached sheet showing spin-offs and dates of important Intermedia activities). By 1974 Intermedia Press had eclipsed the founding group, Intermedia Society. Intermedia Society had created and initiated an exciting new art scene in Vancouver and left in its wake many groups that were central to the continuation of modern art and writing on the West Coast.

Intermedia was involved in audio-visual programs, photography, dance, environmental research, exhibition projects, educational programs (in schools and community centres), film and video workshops and shows, media and design consulting, poetry readings, a mime troupe, etc. etc. There were many well-known artists, writers and musicians connected to Intermedia. Some of these people were Bill Bissett, Henry Rappaport, Jack Shadbolt, Doris Shadbolt, Werner Aellen, Gregg Simpson, Gary Lee Nova, Gerry Gilbert, Michael Morris and many more (see attached list showing the various core groups that made up Intermedia).

The files originally created by Intermedia have been kept in order and noted in the inventory. All other files and series have been created to complement the original filing system. Because of this there are files that have either duplicate or additional information to the information provided in the original filing system (see Selective Cross Reference List).

During the history of The Intermedia Society certain artists have been associated with the conception of intermedia in one way or another, at one time and another, and in many ways still.

PHOTOGRAPHS

Photographs can be found in the BC Historical Photograph Collection [BC 1518/1-723]. A number of the photos are undersized and have been stored in the "Undersized Print" file. This fact has been indicated in the inventory. Negatives and slides are noted as such and stored in appropriate locations. An inventory to the photos follows on the proceeding pages.

OVERSIZE POSTERS, ETC.

Oversize posters, etc. are filed in the MSS Map files under "I". One very large poster (Folder no.4-2) is kept in the bottom drawer of the large map cabinet in the MSS room.

INVENTORY FOR PHOTOGRAPHS IN THE INTERMEDIA PAPERS

The photographs in the Intermedia Papers have been removed and placed in the BC Historical Photograph Collection. They have been given a corporate call number: BC 1518. The various formats (ie. negatives, undersized prints, regular prints and slides) have been noted in the body of the inventory itself. The listing of the 'Box/File numbers' has been included only for means of cross reference with the non-photographic component of the Intermedia Papers.
